We are happy to announce that we now offer a leadership training (2 x 2 days) focused on the questions and needs of young professionals in the first 10-15 years of their professional life.

The first years on the job involve many important decisions and changes. Young professionals with high potential are quickly promoted to new positions, and new skills are required/needed and confidence is demanded in each role.

Many of these skills are not just technical and/or professional skills that one has studied for. Many of these skills are "soft skills." For leadership skills it is helpful and important to understand what you stand for, what makes you "tick" and why certain behaviours are helpful and others not. Only with these skills, it is possible to deal with teams, conflicts and interpersonal challenges in a confident way.

Our training is designed to develop these leadership soft skills, along the way provide room for personal development and thus pave the way to a successful professional career.

The leadership training is open to all young professionals with priority being given to alumni of the Oskar von Miller Forum.
